

PAMPLUNE GRAPEFRUIT ROSÉ

The practice of adding fruit juice or syrup to rosé wine has a long history in the sun-soaked South of France. Sipping these brightly colored low-alcohol beverages on the beach was something of a regional indulgence until in the early part of this decade one producer bottled a rosé pamplemousse (grapefruit in French), and a phenomenon was born! Since then, sales throughout France have exploded, and in the last few years this delicious style of rosé has taken the USA by storm! The bright pink hue, the peachy hints and vivacious grapefruit nuances, and the overall freshness of this versatile low-alcohol rosé, make it irresistible. Don't miss your chance to sample this fashionable and versatile rosé – use it in a spritzer, use it as a cocktail base, or just enjoy it ice cold in your glass all summer long!

AMELIA

This week double your eating pleasure with Excalibur's Double Gloucester, an English cheese that is packed with flavor. Double Gloucester is a traditional, full fat, hard cheese made from the milk of once nearly extinct Old Gloucester cows, with origins that trace back to 1498 in the English region of Gloucestershire. Aged for a minimum of 4 months this cheese has a smooth and buttery texture with rich and nutty flavors. Perfect for slicing onto sandwiches, cubing up into a salad or shredded on top of a bowl of chili, this cheese is a perfect alternative for any recipe or craving that calls for yellow cheddar, and pairs wonderfully alongside a glass of Syrah or a British Ale. Usually $5.99 per 7oz wedge, the Excalibur Double Gloucester will be on sale this week for only $3.99! Cheers and Bon Appetit!

NEW IMAGE BREWING

As the summer rolls on, you may be looking to finally get into the juicy/hazy IPA craze. The problem is, everyone's making one and they're not all worth your time. If you can only try one, you'd be hard-pressed to do better than New Image Brewing's East Coast Transplant. This hazy double is billed as a Vermont-style IPA after the transplanted brewery's original home in the Northeast, and they sure know how to do New England style right. Pouring a crisp, hazy gold color with tons of tropical hop notes rising out of the glass, this is a clean-drinking treat that won't disappoint. There's definitely some juice in here, but it's got some bitterness and backing malt flavors to balance it out so it tastes like, you know, a beer and not a pina colada. The haze definitely gives it a bit of a different mouthfeel, but it doesn't make your throat itch on the way down. All of the pieces are in great balance and proportion to create a New England IPA that sets the standard for any others you might try. If they taste like this, that means the brewers knew what they were doing.
