

COOPER HILL - PINOT NOIR 2016

Fall seems to be picking up speed and I'm really glad that we've seen a nice little warm up from the winter immersion of a couple of weeks ago! I've been starting to hear people talking about Thanksgiving plans and would like to share a wine option that is a classic pairing with turkey and all the side dishes that may accompany it. Cooper Hill Pinot Noir from Oregon is a great option due to its elegant balance of fruit and earthiness. This pretty Pinot Noir is organic and sustainably grown and shows vibrant cherry, dark berry, raspberry and cranberry aromas that pair perfectly with harvest meals. Good acidity and soft tannins won't overpower turkey and the dried herb notes and spice will pair really well with all of the classic side dishes. If you're looking for a 'no-brainer' pairing, this is a great option!

Stem Cider Salted Cucumber

As we cling to these last temperate days, its only appropriate that we do so with a cooling local brew in hand. And while this week's feature isn't technically brewed, it is weird enough to catch the eyes of the adventurous and refreshing enough to be enjoyed by anyone nostalgic of the warm summer behind us. Stem Ciders out of Denver, CO and their Salted Cucumber cider might be one of the most underrated and successfully daring seasonals on our shelves. On the nose, a sharp aroma of earthy white pepper and saline dominates the profile and mask any indication of an apple base. Crisp flavors of peppery cucumber skin, lemongrass, and invigorating saltiness elate the palate while a sour apple pucker reverberates throughout the finish. By keeping the body light and carefully playing off our taste buds' primary flavors, Stem Ciders proves that simplicity can outperform complexity with enough attention to detail. Come pick up a 4-pack of this unique cider today while it's still around! Cheers!
