

CASINI BORDEAUX 2016

I haven't been drinking Bordeaux in recent months and thought it would be fun to retaste one of my old standards. Cassini Bordeaux is made from 100% Merlot grown along the right bank in the region of St-Émilion. Winemaker, Arnaud Daudier de Cassini is devout in his minimal intervention philosophy when it comes to winemaking. He farms organically, without the use of insecticides or anti-mildew chemicals and harvests all of his fruit by hand. This wine is un-oaked, unfined, unfiltered, and a truly unique value. Without wood influence, the purity and freshness of the fruit is highlighted. Aromas and flavors of clove, plum, raspberry, and cherry are seamlessly intertwined with ripe tannins and bright acidity.

I'm excited to introduce to you this week a little delight from Vermont: Fat Toad Farms. Since 2007 Fat Toad Farms has been working to create and perfect the art of goat's milk caramel making, focusing on traditional cooking methods and using a small number of fresh, simple, all-natural ingredients. Working close in hand with award winning Vermont Creamery to source the freshest goat's milk this line of caramel sauces are the perfect balance of sweet and tangy, you can truly taste the goat's milk in each jar. It's perfect for drizzling over fresh or baked apples, pancakes or homemade crepes. Save a dollar on each flavor; original (usually $5.99) and salted bourbon (usually $6.99) this week only and ring in the change of seasons with this little 2oz piece of heaven that tastes like Fall. Cheers and Bon Appetit!

As the warm summer days leave us for near-freezing nights, our palates begin to desire something more. Enter Jolly Russian: Odell Brewing Company's rum barrel-aged Russian Imperial Stout. Pouring pitch black with a timid chocolate head, this stout prepares the taste buds with a rich and roasted aroma of coffee, bitter cocoa, spiced rum and vanilla that mingle together surprisingly well. Upon first sip, bold flavors of milk chocolate, molasses, and coffee soak the palate with a stratum of rum flavor that interweaves itself throughout the beer rather than standing apart. As the beer warms, more delicate flavors of coconut, dried fig, and toffee come to surface along with spiced rum and tannic oak flavors that lead to a dry, roasted finish. At a dangerously drinkable 13.3% ABV, paired with the subtleties of the barrel from the esteemed Mount Gay Distilleries, you'll want to store one of these in the cellar until next year to see how the beer develops with time. Come in today and pick up a 12-ounce bottle of Jolly Russian today. Cheers!
