VALE DO BOMFIM - DOURO RED 2016

I'm sure that a lot of you are familiar with Port, the delicious red dessert wine from Portugal. Well recently, several Port houses have also started producing and exporting dry table wines, both white and red, from their vineyards in the Douro Valley. Vale do Bomfim red is produced from vineyards that traditionally supply Dows. The Symington family began making dry wines for the family and friends and as production and quality increased, more became available to outside markets. Vale do Bomfim is a delicious and elegant red made from a blend of Portuguese varietals: Tinta Barroca, Touriga Franca, Touriga Nacional, Tinta Roriz, and Tinta Cao. Don't let the names scare you though, the wine is a nice balance of blackberry, plums, floral notes, pepper spice and a touch of licorice. Its medium to full body and nicely balanced acidity make this a great wine for everyday drinking. Cheers!

AMELIA'S

When it comes to meats that grace a charcuterie board, prosciutto seems to always take the spotlight. This week it's time to try what I like to refer to as prosciutto's little brother; speck. Very similar to prosciutto, speck is made from the same cut, the hind leg, and cured the same way. But unlike prosciutto, speck is slowly-smoked as the final step in the curing process. After living in Parma, Italy (the origins of prosciutto making), the makers of La Quercia meats of Norwalk, Iowa took their newfound knowledge of traditional meat curing back to the Midwest and have been producing award winning cured meats since 2005. Smoked over real apple wood, and using antibiotic free, vegetarian fed pork, this speck is deep in flavor with a gentle sweetness that will exceed your palate's "eSPECKtations." Great on sandwiches, salads and pizzas, use speck as a substitute the next time you see prosciutto in a recipe and be sure to pair it alongside your favorite lager or dry hard cider. Usually $8.99 for a 2oz pre-sliced package, the La Quercia Speck will on sale for a steal this week at only $5.99! Cheers and Bon Appetit!

PIKE'S PEAK BREWING

We survived the bomb cyclone snow-pocalypse or whatever the news was calling it, so why not celebrate with something warm and welcoming? Pike's Peak Brewing's Gold Rush is an unassuming little yellow can that's hiding an 8.7% ABV Belgian Golden Strong Ale that pours the color of pale straw with a slight haze and treats your nose to yeasty and citrusy aromas. The flavor profile is wheaty and slightly sweet up front, then cranks up orange and lemon zest with some spice on the finish. That funk from the yeast doesn't show up as strongly on the palette as some other Belgians we've tried recently. There's a little bit of warming from the alcohol, but it doesn't taste super boozy, so be careful around this one! It can sneak up on you. Cheers!
