

LONGRIDGE CHARDONNAY 2017

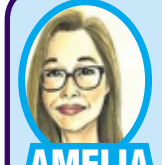

When we arrived at the Longridge winery and restaurant in Stellenbosch we were instructed to take a glass of the Longridge MCC Brut and remove our shoes to walk the garden barefoot. This combination of the earth against the soles of our feet and the glass of fabulous bubbles were extremely relaxing and they pretty much had me sold at that point. Then we sat and introduced ourselves while we were served the most decadent, vegan gnocchi I have ever tasted along with this 2017 Longridge Chardonnay. While the gnocchi was amazing, the Chardonnay had me beside myself by how well put together this wine is. A very versatile Chardonnay with great aging potential, this wine will only improve over the next five years or so, and it's fantastic out of the bottle now, to boot. Winemaker, Jasper Raats practices organics and biodynamic in the vineyards, as well being as hands free as possible in the cellar. This 100% estate grown Chardonnay is peachy on the palate with notes of guava and a little breadly mouthfeel. A Chardonnay balanced flawlessly with citrus and lime flavors coursing through a long, bright finish! Mouthwatering and delicious with roast turkey and soft cheeses.

So now that Manchego has been put on your radar a couple of weeks ago, it's time to shine some light on another cheese that is of great importance to Spain's culinary arsenal; Mahon. Mahon is a soft to hard cheese made from cow's milk and is named after the port of Mahon on the island of Menorca off of Spain's Mediterranean coast. Considered one of the most versatile cheeses in Spanish gastronomy this aged cheese is firm and complex with both savory salty notes and a sweet, nutty, backbone. Crumbly and perfect for grating over pasta or sliced alongside dried fruits this cheese pairs well with a Spanish red such as Garnacha or Rioja. Usually $8.99 per 4.7oz wedge the Ponce de Leon Mahon will be on sale this week for only $6.99. Cheers and Bon Appetit!
