

CASCINA
CHICCO
LANGHE NEBBIOLO

Ernesto Faccenda purchased his first hectare of land in the 1950s in the heart of Roero, Italy. From that first small plot, Faccenda's winery has grown to more than 40 hectares and is now run by his son and grandchildren. Since 2014, Roero has been a UNESCO World Heritage Site, though a sense of preservation and deep dedication to the land has been ever present in Cascina Chicco wines. Their 2017 Langhe Nebbiolo is a classic representation of the varietal, showcasing a floral, elegant palate and dichotomous structured tannins. Pair a glass with earthy fare, like rare marinated steak topped with feta cheese, lamb stew, or seared radicchio with roasted beets. Cheers! Jamie

This week's food pick is a cheese that combines two of my favorite things into one delectable bite; goat's milk and wine! I've been on a bit of a Spanish cheese kick and I can't help but keep the ball rolling with the Mitica Drunken Goat. Drunken Goat is a Spanish goat's milk cheese that spends 2-3 days soaking in a red wine paste made from the Monastrell grape, hence the playful name. After its red wine bath, the cheese is then aged for two and a half months giving way to a semi-soft and creamy texture with gentle fruity flavors. The time spent in wine and the short aging process makes this a crowd-pleaser, perfect for parties or just enjoying alongside a spread of meats and crackers. Pair this cheese with a fruity red wine such as a Pinot Noir, Beaujolais, a Spanish Garnacha or a fruited sour beer. Usually $8.99 per 6oz wedge, the Mitica Drunken Goat will be on sale this week for $6.99. Cheers and Bon Appetit!
